Shenandoah Valley Westminster-Canterbury receives "deficiency free" inspection ensuring retirement community meets the Highest Standards of Excellence

Shenandoah Valley Westminster-Canterbury (SVWC), a continuous care retirement community in Winchester, VA, has been awarded a rating of "zero deficiencies" in its latest annual inspection conducted by the Virginia Department of Health and Human Services.

"The Shenandoah Valley Westminster-Canterbury employees make up an extremely dedicated team and this commendable inspection rating reflects the caliber of service they provide our residents." said Jeannie Shiley, Chief Executive Office of SVWC. "Our mission is to provide the highest possible quality of life, in an environment that enables residents to use their gifts fully, live their lives richly and enjoy with dignity the years God has given them."

A survey team from the Department of Health and Human Services visited the retirement community in September of this year. The annual inspection evaluates how well the nursing home provides care to its residents by meeting regulatory standards.

The Health Center at SVWC is under the direction of Cathy Farmer, Administrator and Michelle Harris, Director of Health Services and serves approximately 40 residents. SVWC opened in 1987 and is located at 300 Westminster-Canterbury Drive, Winchester, VA.
